Certified CPRT-Supervisor and Trainer

Sue Bratton, Ph.D., LPC-S, RPT-S is Professor Emerita, University of North Texas, and Director Emerita, UNT Center for Play Therapy with 30 years of experience as a practitioner and researcher. Sue is a nationally and internationally known speaker and author with over 90 publications and 300 professional presentations in the areas of play therapy and child and family counseling, with a specific focus on CCPT and CPRT. She is co-author of Child Parent Relationship Therapy (CPRT), the CPRT Treatment Manual, and CPRT in Action, a demonstration video illustrating CPRT with adoptive families, as well as three additional contemporary edited texts. Her research agenda focuses on examining the effectiveness of play therapy, CPRT, and school-based counseling services for young children and their families. Sue is a Past President of the Association for Play Therapy (APT), recipient of the 2016 APT Lifetime Achievement Award, 2007 APT Outstanding Research Award, among many others. She is an active social advocate for children at the local, national and international level.

Training Description:

The child's complex and sometimes difficult journey toward healing will be explored in the context of an integrative humanistic play therapy/filial therapy approach. Allowing children with a history of interpersonal trauma and attachment disruptions to access and integrate their experiences in safe and manageable ways is essential to the healing process, particularly for children who have experienced pre-verbal traumas stored as implicit memory. Case example and video vignettes will be used to examine attachment dynamics and the complexity of trauma play in terms of its personal meaning for the child and how that informs the critical work within the child's system. Strategies and examples of when and how to effectively involve caregivers will be presented. Neurobiological and developmental aspects of interpersonal trauma and attachment disruptions will be discussed in support of an integrated, research-informed humanistic play therapy intervention, grounded in Child-Centered Play Therapy and Child-Parent Relationship Therapy.

Learning Objectives

1. Name two developmental considerations in providing play therapy interventions with children who have experienced early interpersonal/relationship trauma.
2. Discuss two rationales for an integrated humanistic play therapy/filial play therapy approach for children presenting with early interpersonal/relationship trauma.
3. Discuss considerations for involving parents directly in the play therapy process when working with this population.
4. Discuss two guidelines for clinical decision-making regarding the timing of play therapy and family work with children presenting with a history of early interpersonal/relationship trauma.
5. Discuss considerations for the person of the play therapist when working with this population.
6. Describe research rationale for humanistic play therapy approaches for children who have experienced early interpersonal/relationship trauma.
